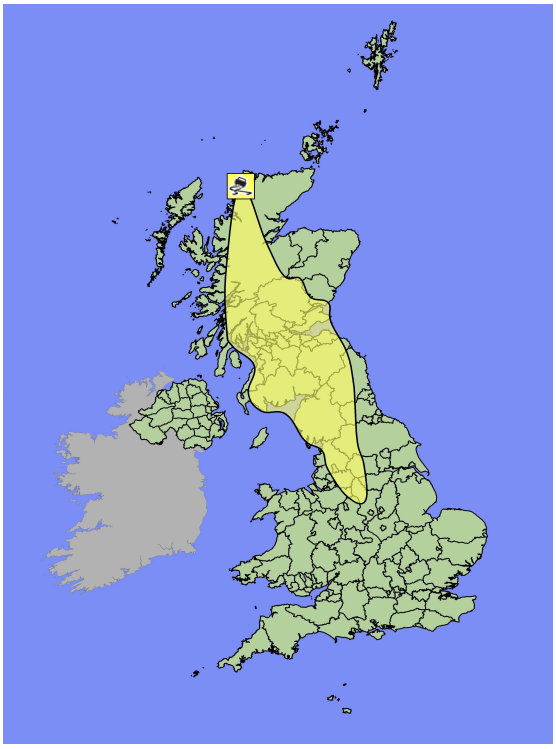
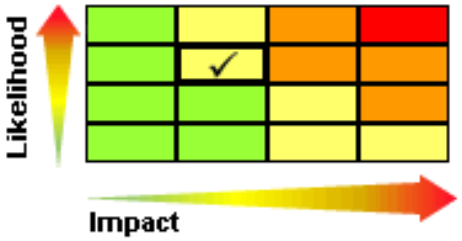
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold northerly air flow will become established during Tuesday night, to the rear of a band of wintry showers moving south across Scotland and then northern England. Clear spells before and after the showers will lead to an increasing risk of ice, notably for higher level routes initially, but at lower levels as well later.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 19:00 on Tue, 05th Feb 2013 until 11:00 on Wed, 06th Feb 2013

Icy stretches are likely to form on untreated surfaces across Scotland and northern England during Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning, with upland areas most prone early in the period following snow and partial thaw. Further wintry showers in the overnight period are likely to increase the ice risk by dawn on Wednesday.

The public should take extra care and be aware of the risk of ice on untreated surfaces.
